Dear Participants,

I am looking forward to our January time together in beautiful northern New Mexico. You should bring closed-toed shoes and snow boots as the weather can surprise us; think about a pair of slippers as well. We often have sunny weather for hiking in the day, but it gets really cold once the sun goes down, and its always coldest before dawn; it can also be snowy, icy, and muddy. (Our class room is warm so layers are best). Our activities with the clay will be adjusted according to the weather, but some of our firing techniques require us to be outdoors.

The studio has all of the tools and equipment we will need, but if you have special tools that you are enjoy or are accustomed to, feel free to bring them. You should label your personal items.

We will be working mostly in the daylight hours. While there will be activities some evenings and weekends and you will meet people, think about bringing your own activities. Remember, the Ghost Ranch library is open 24/7!

Safe travels and I will see you in January.
