Dear Ghost Ranch Writers,

I am delighted to welcome you to WinterTerm in the high desert, and to my class, "Writing Place: Awakening the Interior Landscape." This course runs from January 21-28.

Ghost Ranch's painted hills and open sky have drawn artists and writers for generations. Your being here means that you, too, have heard the call. Welcome. My hope is that you will allow yourself to open during our time together and absorb all that this sacred place has to offer.

Please bring writing materials (pens, pencils, notebooks), as well as a laptop, as I will require some assignments to be submitted electronically. Additionally, I will be incorporating time outdoors during this class—options for gentle hikes and, depending on temperature, even outside writing time—so please come prepared with layers, shoes to hike in, hat, gloves, and whatever else you might need for outdoor activities.

When you arrive, plan for a brief orientation Sunday evening after dinner. Our class sessions will tentatively* be held Monday through Friday from 9:00 to 12:00, with evening workshops after dinner from 6:30 to 8:30 pm. Afternoons will be yours to write, and there will be some Ghost Ranch programming certain evenings as well, which we will work around. (*Note: the schedule will be finalized once you're here - we can decide together depending on peoples' preferred productive periods!)

I will send readings closer to our first session once the class list is finalized. For now, you can feel free to email me if questions or concerns arise before we meet: carolinef@ghostranch.org.

I look forward to meeting you!

Very warmly,
Caroline
